Colliery Horror. By Telegraph to The Times.
LONDON, March 11.— By Cable and Asso. ciated Press.] In the Commons this even-ing Lord Kandolph Churchill, resuming the debate on the report of the Parnell Commisslon, said that from beginning to end these proceedings were vitiated by their thoroughly unconstitutional character. When the government decided to set aside the ordinary tribunal, it must have held that the charges against the Parnellites constituted a prima facie case against the accused. When the government held there was a prima facie case, it was its duty to prosecute criminally. Churchili then argued the matter on constitutional grounds, Churchill then provinces. argued the matter on constitutional grounds, and defied any lawyer to show precedent or parallel for anything approaching the government's action in appointing a commission constituted of three judges to fulfill the 'unctions of judge and jury. He appealed to the House to vote against proceedings, so utterly unique and unprecedented. Never within a century and a half had any public man been exposed to such tests and tri is as Parnells Every clause of the inquiry bill in the House, except the first, was forced through without debate, by the use of a cloture so ruthless that nothing but the most urgent consideration of judice forced through without debate, by the use of a cloture so ruthless that nothing but the most urgent consideration of public safety could justify it. The Constitutional party that in 1882 resisted the cloture now applied it. In 1882 the government declared that the cloture was a most unconstitutional and dangerous innovation. In 1883 it used the cloture in a most unconstitutional and dangerous manner, for the purpose of forcing upon its opponents an unprecedented, unparalleled and tremendous instrument of oppression. What had been the result of this mountainous parturition? A reptile monster—Pigott! What had been the delivery, with all their skill and parliamentary instruments? A ghastly, bloody, rotten fetus—Pigott! Pigott! Pigott! Parnelite cheers, In making this motion the government was violating its own law.

Chamberlain said it was on invitation of the Parnelities that the matter was made the subject of inquiry. He denied that the commission was the result of his perso at suggestion. Experience showed that it was the best and only tribunal to conduct the inquiry. Gladstone had admitted the assignity of faith of the judges. He asked to the best and only tributal the assiduity, ablity, learning and perfect absolute good faith of the judges. He asked to whom the House would appeal if it refused to adopt the judges' opinion on a matter of fact. He warned the House, with imperfect recollections of the terms of the report, we last assuming judicial functions by decrining to accept the judges' findings. He arged the thouse to leave the matter in the hands of the nation.

Jennings explained that he had no desire to stab the government in the back. Churchill's speech was a complete surprise to him, and changed his position, his own amendment not being intended to be hostile to the government.

Labonchere related from his own independent inquiries the circumstances of the meeting between a constable of Pinkerton's men and a British constable at Kansas City. Both were employed by the Times as agents, proving that the government had abetted negotiations which amounted to offering Sheridan £25,000 for a document that would Sheridan 225,000 for a document that would incriminate Parnell.

Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer, repudiated Churchill's statement that the government had acted unconstitutionally. While he was defending the importality of the judges, the Parnellitus created disorder by shouting "Pigott I P.gott P'etc.

Proceeding, Goschen asserted that Le Caron was employed in the secret service under the Liberal government.

Fowler, who was then Secretary of the Treasury, rose twice and angrily protested that nobody knew better than the Chancellor of the Exchequer that he could know nothing of such matters.

A scene of most intense excitement lasting several mitrutes, followed, Göschen taunted Sexton in reference to the Salisburg letter, and both rose to their feet and neither would give way. Goschen and the Parnellites hurled such epithets as "coward," etc., amid shouts of "adjourn" and calls of "Moriey."

Caine moved his amendment. Morley congratulated him for the courage he displayed, and said he would support the amendment.

Smith's motion with reference to the commissioners' report was then agreed to, amid cheers from the ministerial benches.

The Sun also says: "It is well for the public to know that all the Sun asks of the city of San Diego is its rights under a written contract, and that the furore which has been made over the tax lists due to political and business rivairy. Opening of the State Citrus Fair Yesterday.

Hazard's Pavilion Filled with Fruit' Flowers and People.

Finely-arranged Exhibits from the Southern Counties.

The Opening Exercises Last Evening-Address by the Hon. J. de Barth Shorb-Remarks by Gov. Waterman. Have you ever doubted the ancient story of the Garden of Hesperides, and deemed that its golden truits of which you have read were but a pleas ant myth, the charming fiction of a glowing fancy? If so, go with the crowd to Hazard's Pavilion, and look in upon the Citrus Fair which was opened last evening, and breath the breath of the tropics in the fragrance of the orange, the spicy odor of the M. Peterson Charles glitter amid the orange gold; rosycheeked apples and tempting-looking strawberries peep timidly out here and there beneath the overshadowing green leaves, as if amid all this marvelous citrus wealth, they with their lesser charms felt hardly at home.

Plump and downy clusters of raisins are displayed, but after all it is the long tables which glow like the gardens of Hesperides with their golden fruits which take the eye and fill us with wonder. Who that sees this display but i filled with astonisment at what semitropical California has accomplished? At the first Citrus Fair held in Southern California, scarcely more than a decade of years ago, but six oranges were on exhibition. Those pioneers who first $16,098 00 planted their orange orchards were nen of large hope and determination. Some looked upon them as visionary. $18,902 00 When Riverside planted her citrus trees in her barren sands and talked of her coming harvests men turned aside to laugh at her hopes and to scoff at these much talked-of possiblities. The "cow counties" of the south were good enough for pasturage, but the northern section the State shrugged its shoulders knowingly and talked of our folly But last night the unanswerable logic of results confronted us, and, instead of those six first children of early hopes, there were hundreds of thousands of oranges, as golden, as sweet as juicy and perfect as ever swung on the boughs of the orange trees along the sunny shores of the Mediterranean. The vast Pavilion took on the color of them. Every ray of light reflected them, and no where could the eye turn but it was met by the orange and the lemon in their tempting perfection.

oranges set in beds of lemons. The names of all the sections which have exhibits are formed in this way, and nothing could be more beautifully effective. Never, anywhere under the sun, were finer oranges or Jemons displayed, and the skill of the exhibitors has been called into play in arranging them in the most attractive form. There are orange pyramids glowing enough for the suns of fifteen centuries to have looked down upon, but firm and sound as if ripened but yesterday. There are golden fountains, and stars and great banks of the ripened fruits. There are crosses and massive anchors and other designg "too numerous to mention," and sometimes lovely green borders of smilax and graceful ferns, and sun, were finer oranges or lemons dis

AT THE PAVILION. The Work of Yesterday-Judges at Work. Early yesterday morning the Pavilion was the scene of unusual activity. All the committees from the localities represented were busy at their respective booths arranging their tables, and strange to say, the fair opened on time. The Pavilion is tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the artistic manner in which the exhibits are displayed favorably impresses immediately on entering the one immediately on entering the building. Here at once is a seeme to denote the triumph of the horticulturist and florist. The visitor at one glance can form some idea of the wonderful resources of this country. The beautiful golden fruit with its background of flowers delights the esthetic, while the practical and substantial resources of Southern California are shown in the quality and variety of the exhibit. Six of the best counties of the State have exhibits from various localities within their from various localities within their boundaries, and each is trying to excel in its displas THE JUDGES. At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon the judges put in an appearance, and the emibitors were requested to vacate the hall while these gentlemen made the rounds and examined the fruit. The judges had the hall to themselves until 4 o'clock, and no one else was permitted to enter the place. They will not be ready to make the awards until Thursday evening, at which time they will decide who are to take the prizes.

LAST EVENING Hazard's Pavilion was thrown open to the public by the managers of the State Citrus Fair, and before 7 o'clock the immense hall was crowded with ladies and gentlemen, and children of all ages. Several ladies, who were deter-mined to be present at the opening of the biggest citrus fair ever held in Southern California, were present with their baby carriages, and when they presented themselves at the door the doorkeepers refused them ad-mission. They would not be put down, however, and with fire in their eyes they swooped down on Secretary Gray and demanded their rights. Capt. Gray hesitated a mo-ment, but when the ladies informed him that they would be compelled to remain away in case he refused to admit their buby carriages the Captain gave in and the carriages were admitted.

Hundreds of people made their way to the gallery and secured seats from which they could get a good view of the lower floor and the stage. Others entered at once upor inspection of the fruit which covered the tables that occupied over half of the space of the occupied over hair of the space of the entire building. They went to work as if they had never seen such a col-lection of yellow fruit before, and for a couple of hours they were moving from table to table.

THE EXHIBITS. It would be almost impossible to give a description of the exhibit in the limited space at command. On entering the hall one's eyes are greeted by a sea of yellow fruit, fantastically arranged on tables and boxes that tower many feet in the air. The first exhibit is an immense archway in front of the their tempting perfection.

Capt. F. Edward Gray has been the general manager and superintendent of the great work of arranging the exbeing thrown from a cart to the ground hibits and the decorations. Of the cover the boxes. Orange leaves and near the Second-street Park. Consid-

It occupies fully one-eighth of the is made up of 700 boxes of oranges, lemons and limes, and the arrangement of the fruits on the tables shows that the people of San Bernardino county understand how to organize a citrus exhibit. The oranges are mostly from Riverside, and range in price from three to four dollars a box. The Riverside people take consider-able pride in their display. Their table is loaded to the edges with large, clean fruit. It is made up to show the quality of their fruit more than any-thing else, for there is but little green about the table, and the fruit shows up to good advantage. Riverside is red-hot after first place, and the general opinion among the visitors last night seemed to be that they will win. Their display is composed of 310 boxes of fruit, valued at $3 a box.

Next in order comes THE SAN DIEGO EXHIBIT. This display is handsomely arranged and presents a most attractive appearance. The San Diego people put down lemons and currosities in the form of freaks from orange and lemon trees. The exhibit is made up from 100 boxes of fruit, valued at $3 a box. The manof fruit, valued at $3 a box. The managers have spent considerable time in placing their fruit in shape, and they have been more than successful in getting it in an attractive position.

ORANGE COUNTY was not anxious to enter for the first prize when the invitations were sent out, but the people changed their out, but the people changed their minds and they are here in force, and have a display that no one can be ashamed of. They have about one hundred and fifty boxes of fruit that has been well chosen. The immense tables are loaded with large, clean oranges and other fruit, which presents a most attractive appearance. The Santa Ana display is very attractive. The persons who arranged their fruit Santa Ana display is very matter. The persons who arranged their fruit are not amateurs in the citrus fair business, for they have made the most of their fruit, which is of a superior quality, and hundreds of people crowded around to feast their eyes

All of the fruit in this display is of a superior quality, and is valued at $3 a box. The oranges are arranged in artistic figures, which are handsomely dressed with flowers and evergreens, and present a most attractive appearance. ANAHEIM'S EXHIBIT is not large, but it is neat and artistic Blanchard, Sinta Paula; Clark Millor, San Diego county.

lery. They have one-half of the gallery, and while those counties do not pride themselves on citrus fruits, they have arranged an exhibit that will compare with any in the ball. They have spent considerable money in arranging their display, and their space was crowded with a delighted crowd of spectators all evening. The ladies and gentlemen who superin-tended the arrangement of fruits are certainly artists, for they have succeeded in getting a magnificent effect, and they will doubtless get some first prizes. THE EXHIBITORS.

The mountains of yellow fruit that are so handsomely arranged over the big hall have been gathered from the citrus—fruit-growing—counties—of the Sixth—Congressional District. Mayor Hazard and quite a number of invited guests, including members of the Chamber of Commerce, took seats on the stage, and the audience moved to the back part of the hall so that they might be as near the speakers as possible. The band filed into the handsome band-stand that had been arranged for them in the center of the hall, and the ceremony was opened

THE PROGRAMME LAST NIGHT. At 8:15 C. M. Wells called the immense crowd of people to order. He stated that when the committee sestated that when the committee se-lected the Pavilion, they thought it would be too large, but they now feel that it will not be half large enough to hold the visitors who are crowded to-gether. He asked the audience to be as quiet as possible while the opening address was being delivered. Mr. Wells then introduced J. de Barth Shorb, who delivered the following ad-dress: dress:

question in the affirmative.

From the East we have recent reports of excessive cold and consequent destruction of the fruit buds, and certain loss of the ensuing crops. While to us such reports are always distressing, yet, as a matter of fact, the fruit-growers distributed all over the Union, outside of California, are subject to such periodical visitations, and have learned the lesson by aid experience, if they succeed in obtaining one crop out of three they are very fortunate indeed.

It may not be out of place should I ask these many producers to calmly weigh and consider their surroundings and determine if in their struggle for life they are acting wisely to continue on in the struggle where the chances are at least against them. Would it not be wiser to come to California where all the conditions are favorable and failures are almost unknown? In the East forbidding Nature in rigorous seasons and deathly commotions of the air are warning people away. The continent offers only one sure refuge from the extremes of heat and cold, the destruction wrought by storms, and the uncertainty of fickle seasons, and that refuge is here.

This may be considered as an advertising

This may be considered as an advertising address, and perforce it may admit of this criticism, but if, in what I may say, I induce the producers to benefit themselves by coming to California to aid in its greater development, I cannot see much room for an application.

To my friends in the southern portion of this State, and to those whose lines are not the grasped a handful of manuscript in his left hand, bowed gracefully to the audience, turned his right side to the front of the house and read. Then he declared the finest citrus fair ever held in Southern California opened and the band played.

Today's Programme.

An interesting programme has been arranged for today. The doors will be opened at 10 o'clock this morning, and Santz Barbara and Orange founties will have their day. In the admitted at 10 cents per head until 6 contrespind.

All of these conditions should be carefully cold, damp or warm soils with subsoils to correspond.

All of these conditions should be carefully considered by the fruit-grower, because they are to him of prime importance. They would seem to emphasize the truth of the old saying, "Fut not all your eggs in one basket," and that diversity of planting is, after all, the safest policy.

Nature in her wise providence has as wisely adjusted everything in the vegetable world, and has caused one variety of tree to flourish on certain soils, and united them to those conditions, and she has adjusted the covering of the polar bear for the ice to these conditions, and she has adjusted the covering of the polar bear for the ice and snows of the Arctic Ocean.

While the genius of man is almost illimitable, while great natural conditions may be made in some measure to yield to his will and undergo certain modifications, yet, with all this power, he can't make the banana fruit in the Arctic regions, or the snow-plant spring under the equator any more than he can change the laws of our more than he can change the laws of our solar system, bring the earth nearer the sun, or cause it to receive at a different angle the sun's rays and heat.

I would earnestly advise careful study into all conditions of soil nd subsoil before planting any kind of trees, and if the party proposing to plant is not f miliar himself with the proper conditions let him take the advice of some one who does know.

The great advantage of occasions of this kind is the opportunity afforded for study and comparison. The practical results of soils, cultivation and frigation on fruits can be seen here in striking coutrast, a study difficult to make elsewhere.

I may be pardoned in this connection if I

I may be pardoned in this connection if I suggest a matter of importance to the judges appointed to pass judgments on the fruit offered in competition here and to award the prizes.

judges epointed to pass judgments on the fruit offered in competition here and to award the prizes.

Assured that no sectional prejudice will influence their judgments, I would earnestly advise that they consider only the quality and character of the fruits exhibited on a purely commercial basis, what position they must take in the markets of the world. What producers want to know is: What kind of fruit is of the highest commercial value, that which will bring the highest price and quickest sales, and what they must do to produce it. Upon this, and only this, depends the fruition of their hopes, the success of the industry and the wealth of this section. While unique or artistic designs in the form of displays may possibly merit commendations of the judges, while they may praise the zeal, industry and artistic tastes of the exhibitor, they should never lose sight of the main question—what is best in a commercial sense? This is the practical part of this fair, the lessons to be learned, and upon the judges rest the grave responsibility of the teachers.

I am continuously assalled by the question, coming oftentimes from very intelligent gentlemen: "Don't you think this orange business will be overdone? Don't you think, when all the new trees lately planted come into bearing, that the markets will be overstocked; that the prices will fall below the cost of profitable production?" I have but one answer—"No."

The universal law of supply and demand is the basis of this judgment. There, are many important factors that deserve consideration in forming this opinion.

Beyond all other fruits, the taste or cravelings of children for the orange is preeminent, nor am I sure that this peculiarity is confined to children. Once enjoyed, a child never forgets how delicious theorange tasted, nor does long abstinence from its further enjoyment render the sense of deprivation leas keen. Any sensible child will cry for an orange, nor will they give their parents of guardians any peace until their righteous desire is gratified and their craving appeased. Children who are raised among orange trees always prefer this fruit to all others. The universality of this taste has an important bearing in the matter of consumption.

As a rule consumption increases faster has an important bearing in the matter of consumption.

As a rule consumption increases faster than production, and this rule should apply to the orange industry, because the area agon which it can be grown is so very limited and our own population is so great and so rapidly increasing. The use of anything, either in the way of raiment, food or drink, belonging to civilized life, and which by its nature may be regarded as non-essential or a fuxury, soon becomes a matter of necessity. What our forefathers rightly regarded as non-essential or a fuxury, soon becomes a matter of necessity. What our forefathers rightly reverying a luxuries, and indulged in sparingly or only occasionally, belong to our everyday lives, and to do without which would occasion us grave discomfort if not absolute unhapplaces. Once a community

It may be hoped the sad lesson we have learned will not be foreother; that our people will go to work again earnestly, and producing within themselves most of what they consume, and selling all they can, soon repair all the evils of the past. But surely the "times are out of joint," and something must be radically wrong when San Francisco is compelled to purchase, out of the State, between two and three million dollars of eggs to satisfy her annu I consumption, and Los Angeles and Pasadena import their Irish potatoes and fowis from import their Irish potatoes and fowls from

While an earnest friend and strong advo-While an earnest friend and strong advocate in claiming for our country all it may justly be proud of; while I have no fears of its ultimate great destiny; yet, it must not be forgotten with all our great natural advantages, that much depends upon ourselves. One might live in a cabin built on ory of Their Flight Through the Mountains - They Could Have Held the Fort, but Did Not Want to - The Prisoners Decline to Talk.

CHORMICLE AND GARDNER LODGED IN JAIL

Sheiff Martin Aguirre and Sheriff W. H. Reilly of Ventura county arrived on the 9 o'clock train from Ventura last night, bringing W. C. Chormicle and W. A. Gardner, the Castac Cañon murderers, who were lodged in the County Jail. The men were seen at the jail a few minutes after their arrival by a Times reporter, but they declined to make any statement about the crime of which they are charged until after they can consult with their attorneys, and after thanking the of-ficers for the kind treatment they had received at their hands they were locked up for the night. Chormicle is quite an old, man, while Gardner is some years younger. Naither of them some years younger. Neither of them have the look of desperadoes, and would hardly be picked out in a crowd as murderers.

Sheriff Reilly said that on Sunday berilf Relly said that on Sunday he received word where the men were, and that they wanted to give them-selves up. Its then went to the place where they had been stopping and brought them to Ventura. He said that a thousand men could not have captured them unless they had wanted to surrender themselves, as the country is very wild, and Gardner is thoroughly is very wild, and Gardner is thoroughly familiar with every inch of it, having been an old bear hunter in the mountains for some years. They had been camping out on an elevated spur of the mountain, from which they had a view of the entire country for miles around, and could have killed a dozen men before a posse could have reached them, even if they had been discovered. For three days they had lived on bread and water, and held no communication water, and held no communication with any one.

Sheriff Reilly says the men told him Sheriff Reilly says the men told him that they did not intend to run away, but after the shooting came down to the switch, near Castac, for the purpose of giving themselves up, when they saw a crowd, and Gardner, recognizing some of them as belonging to the other faction, and fearing that they would be shot, they took to the mountains, making their way across the range to Ventura for the purpose of giving themselves up. Mr. Reilly says that, after he got to where Chormicle and Gardner were, they told him says that, after he got to where Chormicle and Gardner were, they told him that they had been watching him all day while he was searching for them, and told him everything he did, as they saw him plainly while he was searching for their trail. They did not fully recognize him, they said, or they would night, on account of the court-martial, which convened at 8 o'clock.

many friends.
Sheriff Aguirre said that he had no hand in getting the men, but that when he was notified that they had given themselves up, he concluded to wait-and accompany them to this city. While neither Chormicle nor Gardwhile neither Chormicle nor Gard-ner would make any statement, it is more than probable, from what has been said by their friends, that the theory of self-defense will be advanced. An effort will be made to show that the trouble was forced upon them, and that when the quarrel got to the fighting point, the shooting was done and that when the quarrel got to the fighting point, the shooting was done in self-delense. It is also claimed that they have secured a number of witnesses, who will testify to these facts.

THE CITY MONEY.

An Injunction Issued Against the Treasurer. The city funds still remain in the money for so long without paying any interest, notwithstanding the fact that the bond has been approved and the contract awarded to the City Bank by the Council. President Childress of the City Bank, accompanied by his attorney, yesterday made a formal written demand on Treasurer Johnson for the money, but it was not turned over for the reason that the Treasurer had been served with an injunction brought by Jesse Yarnell to restrain him from so doing. The action is similar to the one recently dismissed against the Mayor and City Council.

The temporary restraining order was issued by Judge Van Dyke, and comes up for hearing on Monday next, when a decision will be given, and the case will then be taken to the Supreme Court.

So far there has been no break in the programme arranged by the banks now holding the money, and it is freely asserted by persons interested that the asserted by persons interested that spe money will never be allowed to get out of the possession of the banks.

There is a lively fight in prospect in the near future, and sensational de-velopments may be looked for at any time, as the banks themselves are not a unit on all the propositions involved. BALDWIN'S BROOD MARES.

A Costly Fatality Among Them-Several Dead. It seems that "Lucky" Baldwin is experiencing a streak of what is not his proverbially good luck. During some recent cold rains a lot of his valuable blooded brood mares, which were turned out in his cienega pa-ture at Santa Anita, took violent colds, and eight of them have been prostrated with congestion of the lungs. Aces and another animal died the other day, and Fallen Leaf succumbed early Monday morning and was gathered to her fathers. She was within a month of foaling. Maggie Enerson, an animal of the finest pedigree and the dam of Molie McCarthy, was in a very bad condition, and, it was believed, could not live through yesterday. She was valued away up in the day. She was valued away up in the thousands. The others are improving, and it hoped that they will recover. The total loss to Baldwin through this mishap will probably not be less than two hundred thousand dollars.

DEMAGOGY and glittering generalities continue to be the main 'arguments' employed by the apostles of extravagance.

THE saloons are placarded with notices reading: "Vote for the bonds." Still, this is not altogether a convincing argument in favor of voting them.

SENATOR MITCHELL yesterday introduced a joint resolution proposing an amendment for election of United States Senator by direct vote.

WE want a sewer system, but we do not intend to permit a lot of sharks to take advantage of our needs, and cram an $800,000 steal down our throats.

GIVE the "mossbacks" a few arguments, just by way of a change. You might convert them, you know. But you certainly will never do so by calling them names.

An eastern sewer expert, even when the possessor of a national reputation, is not necessarily the best authority upon a sewer system for a city in a section which has a rainless summer.

THE sewer ring still refuse to condescend to meet the numerous arguments which have been advanced against the extravagant system now proposed. Is it because they cannot do so?

THE TIMES did good work in the previous sewer campaign, in the line of legitimate arguments and presentation of facts. The facts and figures then published have not been forgotten, and will bear fruit at the polls, this week

INTERIOR sewers, storm drains and outfall are all provided for in the plan described in Mr. Culver's paper, published in THE TIMES of Sunday last, and the total cost is $700,000, instead of $1,597,900, which we are now asked to vote—a saving of $897,900. Thus, it is evidently not a question of voting the bonds or going without sewers, as the big expenditure boomers would have us believe.

WE hear much idle prattle about "mossbacks." "silurians" and "obstructionist" from the boodle boomers. Judging from the late fight to prevent the loaning of the city funds, the people will conclude that a good many of the obstructionists are arrayed on the side of the outfall-sewer bonds. They are pushing a scheme that will obstruct the city's progress, by overloading it with a needless debt

THE Citizens' Sewer Committee examined the sewer question in a fair and pa instaking manner, accomplished much toward a solution of the problem of utilizing the sewage, and the citizens bought for $47,000. Such pointed out various practical ways of doing so. They showed that the entire liberal-minded capitalists to subscribe cluding a sea outlet, for $700,000, or save the Los Augeles building from less, yet the Council has quietly ignored these suggestions, and asks us to vote $1,597,900 for a less desirable

RELIABLE gentlemen-members of the State Horticultural Society-who are in the city from the northern part of the State, assert that the San Fran- ately cisco papers have suppressed much of plain and unmistakable matter of recthe truth regarding the destitution which prevails in that city. A very little claim it ever possessed to influ large number of men have crowded ence the opinions of voters on the into San Francisco from the country, and are in a state of destitution. Large areas of orchard and vineyard are under water, so that spring work cannot be prosecuted, and many trees will about our wet winter down here, but we are well off compared with the northern section.

THE unwarranted fight against the loaning of the city funds at interest has at length been decided in favor of the people, the ordinance directing the transfer of the funds having passed the mere trifle. Does any one believe that Council, on Monday, by a vote of 6 to 3, these men would be so enthusiastic Frankenfield, Shafer and Summerland. Those who opposed the interests of the citizers were unable to maintain their p sicion. It is to be hoped that the injunction suit, which had been furking in the underbrush, and has now been sprung, with the aim of doing scheme to show that John P. Culver, want this opposition has failed to actual engineer, is inconsistent. complish, will be mot in a proper manner, and share a like fute.

OUR PUBLIC BURDENS.

Shall the City Debt Be Increased by Million and a Half?

Can Los Angeles Bear Up Under the Fresh Load of the Proposed Sewer Bonds?

Taxpavers! read the following official statement of the city's funded debt, August 1, 1889, as made by the City Auditor, and then ask yourselves this pertinent and pressing question: "Will. the already overburdened shoulders of Los Angeles be able to bear the increased weight which will be thrown upon them when a million and a half more of municipal debt shall have been created?

In connection with the efforts which are being made to save the local Southern States remain solidly Demoing to note some donations that have been made to similar buildings in other cities Prof. Henry Fairbanks erected a building in the little town of St. Johnsbury, Vt., at a cost of $15,000. Frederick Marquand, of Brooklyn N.Y., gave $300,000 for the building in that city, on condition that the citizens would add $150,000 as an endowment. John Wanamaker gave $85,000 t the Philadelphia building, and $50,000 toward the payment of a debt upon it. The building cost $500,000. John T Sherman, a man not connected in any way with the church, gave the Water town, N. Y. association a building worth $60,000. James B. Germain of Albany, N. Y., has erected a building at a cost of $93,000 upon a lot which works could be well built, in- the moderate amount still required to being lost to the association

> THE Express of yesterday says: Last Sunday THE TIMES and Herald printed a four-column article from Mr. Culver, embodying an extended argument to prove that the city ought not to build an outfall sewer to the ocean.

A paper which thus wilfully, deliberand shamelessly misrepresents a ord has certainly forfeited whatever sewer question. In the article referred to, Mr. Culver not only makes frequent favorable mention of an ocean outlet, but also includes it in his estimate for complete sewer system. The only We have been grumbling difference is that, while the Ballon outfall calls for $696,900, Mr. Culver's plan would only cost $200,000, and he knows of contractors who are ready to undertake the work at that price.

THE ring blithely asks us to bond our little city-already financially embarrassed-for $1,597,900, as if it was for this extravagant expenditure, did they expect to share the burden which it will impose upon the average prop erty-owner, who is not in the ring?

An attempt is being made by the They say that, in a letter written last and share a like fate. The finan-and municipal bush-whackers Chamber of Commerce, he favored an opposed it. A statement so atterly at variance with the truth as this latter one is quite in keeping with the course which the advocates of extravagance have seen fit to adopt-making bold, unsupported statements, and trusting to their own impudence and the indifference of the public to get them credited by at least a few of the voters So far from opposing an ocean outfall, Mr. Culver refers to one, in a favorable manner, half a dozen times in his paper, and an ocean outlet is a part of the system proposed by him. He does, however, oppose the impracticable and extravagant Ballona scheme! We publish this morning a communication from Mr. Culver on the subject. IT is time that a law school should be established in Los Angeles. There is a large number of students here be greatly benefited in the pursuit of their studies by the opportunities which such a school will afford. The inauguration of a course of lectures such as are being given by Col. George H. Smith and Frank H. Howard to the students of law, is a step in the right direction, but their efforts should be supplemented by the founding of a school or college where our rising attorneys may learn the ethics and the fundamental principles, as well as the rules of practice of their profession.

THE route selected for the Ballona sea outlet is about the poorest one, so far as ground is concerned, that could be found. Besides this, according to the ordinance and notice of election. the sewage can only be carried to the ocean beach, whereby an unbearable nuisance would be created: Possibly this is only a blunder, not a trick on part of the framers of the ordinance, but then, in some cases, a blunder is as bad as a crime, and the result in this case will be the same anyhow.

THE speculators, who have no use for a workingman except when they need his votes, are now particularly effusive in explaining how very, very much they have his interests at heart. Mr. Edmunds illustrated the question by an illusion to the election in Louisiana of the Legislature "to which the Senate was indebted for the ple sure of Mr. Eustis's presence, I might say, on the floor of the Senate." He added: "I believe the Senater misrepresents the State of Louislana, and that if there had been an honest vote and an honest count in that State the Senate would not have had that pleasure. A large party of men at once left town for the scene of the disaster to search for the bodies of the men, who it was supposed had been buried alive. After a few hours' search the bodies were found in the bed of a creek some distance below the claim, partially covered with débris and timber, nearly nude, and in a horribly mangled condition. They were probably taken without a moment's warning by the rush of water and earth from the breaking of the reservoirs. Both were Odd Fellows, and highly-respected citizens. When stevadores sought to remove the ballist from the vessel preparatory to loading her with wheat the deputy constables repuised them and Manager Hamilton of the stevadore company was thrown into the water by Constable Sweeney who overturned the gangplank. The officers subsequently went ashore, taking the vessel's compass, quadrant and chronometer as security for the sallors' wages. THAT BLACKMAIL.

THE CARL BROWNE CASE ON TRIAL.

Mr. Boyce Hesitatingly Acknowledges That He Received Some Money from Willie Childs to Pay Somebody for Some Trouble-Very Misty Testimony.

The question whether or no Carl Browne was at one end of telephone No. 999, June 22, 1889, while H. H. Boyce, of the Tribune, was at the other, was under investigation before Judge Cheney yesterday, and the trial took a queer shape before the final adjournment of the day.

It is no doubt pretty well known that Carl Browne is the reversible landscape artist of the nondescript publication known as the Illustrated Cactus, and that he seized upon the sensational career of "Dude" Williams in this city last year as proper material for many pictures and much hog-wash descriptive of the antics of the would-be social leader.

Out of this publication grew a story, which trickled out only by degrees, that Browne had extorted $100, and probably more, from Willie Childs, and the late Grand Jury investigated the case. It transpired that H. H. Boyce, more or less prominently connected with another investigation made by the Grand-Jury, wherein he consess the case of the reading matter. The toke out some of the cartoons and changed some of the cartoons and changed some of the reading matter.

Q.: What was it?
A.: It was an article in reference to a person named Williams. As I understand it, it was in reference to certain transactions.
Mr. Stephens: We object to your conclusions

The Court: Don't give conclusions.

Mr. McComas: Give the conversation?

A.: As I have stated, the conversation was about the article. I think that was about all at that time. I said that was about all at that time. edge.
Q: Was there anything in the paper which showed?
A.: His name I saw on the paper as the writer or proprietor.
Q: Where were you June 22d when you met the defendant?
A.: I don't think I met him that day.
Q: Well, where did you meet him?
A.: He came to my office to see about my going to see Williams at the County Jail. I don't remember exactly what he said. He called in reference to "Dude" Williams, saying Williams wanted to see me.
Q: Do you mean that Williams did want to see you, or that Browne merely told you he did?
An objection to this question was sustained.
Q: Did you have any other conversation with the defendant?
A: No, sir.
Q: Were you present when any one sent a telephone message to him?
A: It was in Mr. Boyce's office, the day the Coctus was to be incomply urged him not to publish it. I think he said his paper was to be issued the next day. He said it would be impossible to make such changes as would be necessary without great expense. The next conversation I think I called him to the telephone and asked him to speak-to Mr. Childs.
Q: Did you recognize the voice?
A: I can't say that I—I can say this: I rang up his telephone, and I suppose he answered.
Q: Who was present when you called for the defendant?
A: Willie Childs.
Q: When you called, whom did you call?
A: Mr. Browne. Some one an-call?"

A.: Mr. Browne. Some one answered.
Q.: Who was it?
A.: I can only state what I have. If I state it will be an impression. I rang up No. 999 and called for Mr. Browne, and some one answered.
Q.: Did you ask who it was?
A.: I think not.
Q.: What did you say?
A.: Objection made and sustained, on the ground that the person at the other end of the telephone was not identified.
The Court (to the prosecution): You

The Court (to the prosecution): You must show who was at the other end of the telephone. You might as well meet that issue now.
Q: Do you or do you not know who was there?

A.: I can only state my impression.
Q.: Did you have a conversation with Browne after that?
A.: I probably did. The next day I think that he said something about—that he had had hard work to do what

C: Did any one?

The Court sustained an objection to this, saying that the witness could not tell who was at the other end of the telephone, and the prosecution withdrew Mr. Childs for the present.

I wanted him to do, on account of changing the matter; the matter I wanted him to exclude from his paper. I think he said he had nothing against these persons. I don't think there was much reference to Willie Childs. The reference to him was that he wasn't going to let him out, but would retain the reference to him.

Q.: Did you have any conversation with Childs in your office in which any money consideration was mentioned?

A.: Yes.

Q.: Was any money paid to you by Willie Childs on that occasion?

A.: No, sir.

A.: No, sir.
Q.: Was there any money paid to you on either one of those days?
A.: On neither of the days.
Q.: Was there any money paid to you at all by Willie Childs during June?

Opening Address by the President, Hon. Ellwood Cooper of Santa Barbara-Gov. Waterman, Mayor Hazard and Dr. Conger Make Brief Speeches - Bugs Under Discussion.

The California State Fruit-growers Convention commenced its thirteenth eassion in the Los Angeles Theater yesterday morning, under the auspices of the State Board of Horticulture. The hour for the meeting had been set for 10 o'clock, but it was half an hour Inter before President Ellwood Cooper called the body to order, at which time there were probably seventy-five fruitgrowers in the auditorium, among them being quite a number of ladies. Besides the president, Gov. Waterman. Mayor Hazard, Dr. O. H. Conger, Dr. J. P. Widney, Rev. Eli Fay, E. M. Jones, B. M. Lelong and others occu-

Jones, B. M. Lelong, and others occupied seats on the stage.

The proceedings opened with a prayer by Rev. Eli Fay, after which the president announced that the next order of business was the election of two vice-presidents, and he called for nominations, when the name of Judge Aiken was proposed by Mr. Thomas.

B. M. Lelong stated that some two months ago the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was notified that it was to nominate two gentlemen for these positions. In pursuance of this notice positions. In pursuance of this notice positions. In pursuance of this notice the chamber made the nominations, and he therefore hoped that the name of Judge Alken would be withdrawn. On this statement, Mr. Thomas promptly withdrew the same of Judge Alken, the latter gentleman acquies-cing cheerfully, as he did not know about the previous arrangement, and Maj. Jones announced the nominations of the chamber, J. B. Lankershim of Los Angeles and Dr. O. H. Conger of Pasadena, when both gentlemen were elected by a unanimous vote.

Maj. Jones then nominated Dr. J. P.

Widney as a third vice-president, and Widney as a third vice-president, and he was also unanimously elected.

President Eliwood Cooper then came to the front of the stage and delivered the semi-anual address, as follows:
Ladies and Gentlemen: This will be the thirteenth State Friit-growers' Convention, and the ninth held under the auspices of the State Board of Horticulture. It has been my privilege to preside at these conventions, beginning with that held in Los Angeles in November, 1885.
At that convention, and at each subsequent one, I called your attention to the important questions which I thought most concerned us. So many times have I repeated these subjects and enlarged upm any special line of interest as manifested in the discussions, that I do not consider it necessary to present the same news again.

In the first instance, a statement somewhat in detail seemed fitting and proper; now most of you are as familiar with the subjects as myself. Those who are now in the line of seeking horticultural knowledge I refer to the reports which we have here for gratultous distribution, and to the programme presented which notlines the dis-was the cause.

The fourth theory, that it was a disease not yet understood, and was spreading with alarming rapidity.

I believe it was generally conceded that the vines died at the top first, that is to say, from the top downward, and not from the root upward, which is usual with plants.

The different authors of these theories were persistent in impressing their views. The different authors of these theories were persistent in impressing their views, which indicated a conviction on their part. It is characteristic of our American people that when anything out of the usual course occurs, every individual rushes after a theory of his own make-up, and those who are not directly interested, after having matured a theory, let the matter rest, and assume an indifferent position as to the result. We are all indirectly sufferers, and should be united as one mind, free from bias, to ferret out the cause and find a remedy.

should be united as one mind, free from bias, to ferret out the cause and find a remedy.

At said convention there were also many severe expressions made criticising experts who were investigating this malady, almost to the extent that they were wrong in all their conclusions. Such a sentiment, if encouraged, will lead us backward instead of forward. I was extremely sorry that any such expressions should have been made. I am conscious that scientists may make mistakes, but all are not on the wrong line of investigation. To the specialist we must look for the solution. I have made no examination, and have seen but little of the vineyards where the disease was prevalent, but I have listened to the statements of the different parties who have examined the vineyards in different localities, experts as well as owners, neighbors and sufferers, and have gathered such information as leads me to the following conclusions:

First, as to the suggestion that the vine might be nearing its end, I am not prepared to seriously consider such a condition. It is true that many plants that once flourished do not now exist, but their disappearance is accounted for by the great convulsions and climatic changes that made their further growth and life impossible. It is also true do not now exist, but their disappearance is accounted for by the great convulsions and climatic changes that made their further growth and life impossible. It is also true that some scientists have sugested that the two species of platanus, the one known on the Atlantic Coast as the buttonwood, the other on this coast as the sycamore, were approaching their end. Since several years they have been subject to serious blights all over the world. This takes place every spring. From this supposed weakness scientists have concluded that the final end was near, but may it not be a disease that could be successfully treated? The loss to the world of the grapevine is more than I am willing to believe is probable.

The first, second and third theories, poverty of soil, more tropical climate or too early pruning, do not satisfy my mind as to the probable cause. Young vines on virgin soil of the best quality have succumbed. Grapes of the finest quality are produced in the tropics; besides, there has been no material change in climate. Pruning could not be the cations, grown for ages without having been disturbed, have died. Neither bad drainage nor alkali will account for it. The fourth theory, that it is a disease, is not so easily disposed of. Experts have asserted that the microscope could not detect any fungi; that the root of the affected one compared with one in a healthful condition was exactly the same; that it was a sort of paralysis, or a wilting death, without any apparent cause.

The impossibility of discovering these poisonous particles—by reason of their minuteness, proves nothing, because if we consult the New American Cyclopedia, page 246, where it describes this character of fungs, under the head of Ordium Albicans, vegetable parasites of man, and Oid-dum Tuckeri, known as mildew tuckery or vine mildew, which has proved such a destructive pest to the vineyards of Southern Europe and Maderia, we will find this statement: "That neither time nor the powers of chemistry avail aucht against them, which are so subtile in their invisibility, and may be wafted from one point of the earth to another by wind and wave." It seems to me, therfore, that it is safer for us to conclude that it is of fungus growth of a poisoneus character, that the particles float and are carried through the air and taking you in the tender leaves, grow and kill-the vine, notwithstanding the fact that the particles and, the fungus growth may be so mutte, so subtile in their character that they remain as yet undiscovered.

In my experiments with poisonous substances, in a mild form, for spraying trees, I found that wherever the insects were touched, they were killed. The second or third day afterward, the tender shoots began witting. This continued by degrees intil all the tree above ground was dead. I preciced the clipping off of the branches, thinking to arrest, the poisonous influence, but it was imeflectual.—In cutting the wilting branches, I found a black: streak between the bark and wood. I would keep on cutting until I found the natural appearance; still the poison would work its way downward, until the roots were reached. When the effect ceased new shoots were thrown up and they are now growing. The trees with which I experimented were the olive and lemon, the effect being about the same on both. The poison entered through the pores, united with the sap and killed the tree above the roots, but why the roots were not killed is more than I can comprehend. I have understood that the vine disease acts to a certain extent in a similar way, that is, the top wilks and dies the first year, without necessarily killing the root. The second year new shoots are thrown out, but wanting in vigor easily succumb to the disease, and the root follows. I sincerely hope that much new light will be given

PARASITES OR PREDACEOUS INSECTS. I desire to call your special attention to this branch of our horticultural work. The success in fighting the red scale with the resin wash, the San José scale with lime, salt and sulphur, or the codlin moth with arsenic washes and the thistie trap ought not to direct our attention from searching for parasites to pit against these insects and destroy them in the manner-Nature intended. I stated at the Fresno Convention that the law would not permit the State board to expend money in sending an entomologist to foreign countries to search for parasites. We should not relax our efforts in trying to secure this work from the National Government. this branch of our horticultural work. The efforts in trying to secure this work from the National Government.

I have read recently, a report on "Insect and Fungus Pests", by Henry Tryon of Queensland, Australia, published in Brisbane in 1889.

I find on examination of this work that they have many noxious insects very destructive in their character, preying upon fruits and fruit trees that have not yet appeared in our State. The greatest precaution should be exercised in the examination of all plants landed on this coast from that country. I have been deeply interested in the gemi-anutual address, as follows:

Lédics and Gentlemen: This will be the intreent State Finiterprovers' Convention, and the ninth held under the auspices of the State Board of Horticulture. It has been my privilege to preside at these convention, beginning with that held in Los Angeles in November, 1885.

At that convention, and teach subsequent one called your with thought of the prastites that are also found there, as described in said work, and the opinion that the practice of the least of the practice of one of these insects, analy, bracol capitat, was a very effectual enemy to the grasshoppers, one informant stating that he had noticed that when the locusts were most numerous this ichnuman ily was to be seen in great force. Count Castleman, the celebrated entomologist, in ref rence to this insect, stated also: This prasite is most important, as I believe it will be to it alone that we may one day owe the disappearance of the locust." Again, on page 18, he says: "The most remarkable case, however, is that of a moth which, in Australia, rids us in great measure of our scale insects. Public attention was first directed to its occurrence by Mr. G. Masters, at a meeting of the Linnean Society of New South Wales held in 1885, at which he exhibited some small moths (afterward named "Thalpochares Coccophaga."), bred from caterpillars found feeding on a coccus which infested the common Zamia. These caterpillars, Mr. Masters remarked, in the course of a few days completely cleared the plant of the scale, devouring the coccus and forming with the scales or empty skins complete coverings for themselves which they carried about on their backs. They fed at night, and during the day fixed themselves securely to the midrib of the frond.

Now, this useful insect is exceedingly common, both in the Toowoomba and Brishane districts, and it is probably widely represented in Southern Queensland. Every tree in these districts which is infested with black scale (Lecanium Olive) will afford examples of "Phalpochares Coccophaga."

Strange to observe we have never met with one in this colony who has recognized the role of this insect. Whenever at Toowoomba we sought typical examples of the black scale for study, we were directed to examine the angles between the branchlets of the orange tree for "extra fine examples" of the coccus we were in quest of. Indeed we found more than once that these alone remained together with funnagine to attest the previous occupancy of the trees by the scale insect in question. In these instances the speci

The time was when California was great from the stores of precious metals hidden in her rugged mountains, and no one believed that it was destined to become the garden spot of the world, as it now is, and for which the State Horticultural Board deserves a share of the credit. The permanent prosperity of any country depends on the fertility of the soil, and the time has now come to lay aside the corner-lot craze and delve into the earth for the treasures that if contains. His Honor referred to the organization of the Home Industry League some years ago, and spoke of the prosperity that continued until the whirlpool of speculation set in. This has now passed away, and Southern California is in a better condition than ever before. He had heard with pleasure the address of the able president, and believed that the time had come when they could invite the world to come to Southern California and make come to Southern California and make growing empire, independent, to a geat extent, of the balance of the world, and is great, not for its mineral wealth, but from great and varied products. We are now entering on a eral wealth, but from great and varied products. A HOUSEKEEPER'S HEAVEN.

The pleasant prediction is made that drad gery will be abolished from the household and the occupation of the demestic servant will be gone.

Valuable Advice for the Present Day.

Mrs. Helen E. Sterrett, in a recent num ber of the Forum, contributes an article entitled "Housekeeping in the Future." In it she tells how in a few years electricity will supply light for the home, the family cooking and washing will be done outside and there will be so little work in the household that the occupation of the domestic servant will be gone.

But Mrs. Sterrett's article is simply prediction, and has no more than a passing interest for the ladies who live in 1890. Their social and household cares are straining their delicate, nervous system, and the result is terrible. Hendaches, backaches, and womanly ills are growing alarmingly common. Many of them find that mem ory is failing; they are unable to recall the names of friends or tell whether they have performed some of their usual house hold duties.

Their nerves are in such a condition that very slight causes, or perhaps no cause at all, may irritate them. Life grows to be a burden. There is no need for despair, but there is great need of caution, Their nerves should be built up, life fortified, and brain restored with that remarkable and brain restored with that remarkable preparation, Paine's Celery Compound Instead of the depressed and languid feelings, after the Compound has been used, they will feel active, vigorous, and happy. To those who are weak and failing, and desire health and happiness instead of illness and misery, we earnestly urge that they act upon this advice.

To visitors and guests from far and near, a welcome greeting.

It may be asked by the cynical "What are our courts for?" The final termination of a suit in Augusta, Me., is attracting some attention now. About two years ago one citizen called another a "Jackass." The matter has been in litigation ever since, the two quarrelers finally compromising by each paying about thirteen hundred dollars. Some cases not much more interesting have been tried hereabouts recently, the county and indirectly the taxpayers, of course, shouldering the expense.

The road crosses Colorado street. The visitors will be greeted by enthusiastic shouts and words of welcome on the part of the reception committee. When the last train has steamed in, and all the invited guests have been comfortably seated in carriages, the line of march will be formed. As announced elsewhere, the game of foot-ball at Sportsman's Park this afternoon will between two Pasadena clevens. The reason Los Angeles will not take part in the performance is because our men think they have been unfairly treated by the team from our sister city, and don't care to play with them until they ante up, so to speak. In other words, the Pasadena club went to Los Angeles Washington's birthday, the afternoon will between two Pasadena words, the Pasadena club went to Los Angeles Washington's birthday, the arrangement being that they were to play a picked Los Angeles eleven on the base-ball grounds. At the time mutually decided upon for the game our men were at the appointed place, but their opponents did not materialize. Investigation proved that the Los Angeles the appointed place, but their opponents did not materialize. Investigation proved that the Los Angeles people thought the day was too disagreeable for the game and refused to play. They also refused to play. They also refused to play. They also refused to play the $10 they had agreed to allow our men for expenses, which was exactly the cost of their conveyance. Later in the afternoon some of the same men who were to have been pitted against our people went to the university grounds and engaged in a match game. After repeated efforts on the part of the Pasadena eleven to get the money due them. peated efforts on the part of the Pasa-dena eleven to get the money due them, the Los Angeles team agreed to com-promise on a basis of $5, which offer was refused. No money has thus far been paid over, and weather prophets say snow will surely fall the day after Pasadena is caught playing foot-ball with Los Angeles.

CATARRH.

Catarrh is often regarded by the patient as a cold in the head, and he often expresses his astonishment at his remarkable tendency to contract fresh cold. Indeed, he declares that he is ascrely free from one cold before he takes another, and he is siways exceedingly careful; it is also a matter of surprise to him that the cold always seems to settle in the head and chroat:

At times many of the symptoms of catarrh seem to abate, and the patient is led to hope that the disease is about to wear off; but another class of symitoms seen appear and he learns to his horror that, instead of recovery from the disease. A sense of weariness is sometimes feel in reading, speaking or singing; hearseness at times occurs, a sensation of dryness is felt in the throat, or it app are that some foreign substance, as, for instance, a hair, obstructed the chroat; there becomes a sense of lan duor and fatigue; the breath lessons on a little exertion, a short, hacking cough, a peculiar sound in clearing the throat, a feeling as though there was not room enough in the coest to breather; these and other symptoms our prior in a short, these and other symptom our prior is about to begin its dreadful work. Up to this time the press of the disease may have been slow and the patient may, in expressing his confident hope that it will "wear off," declare that he has had the catarrh for years and has not seemed to become much worse, not trusts that he will by and by" recover. But this delusion is the grand error that has peopled our competicies with consumption from the season of the proper contract.

Every case of catarrh is ourable when properly treated. Eastern visitors and invalids should avail the melves of the opportunity of being cured before they return home.
